TUESDAY, JAN. 9, 1900.

Dr. W. H. Morgan, for years Superintendent of the public schools in Cincinnati, died in that city Saturday, at the age of 63 years. He with his wife formerly lived near this city.

"The Big Wind" in Ireland.

Last night, January 6, was the sixty-first anniversary of the "big wind in Ireland." There have been other big winds, but there never was one that equaled the first one. Births, marriages and deaths are fixed before and after this particular big wind, and there never was a true born Irishman who has not heard of the "night of the big wind." Many tales have been told about this hurricane. According to the relations it came up about 9 o'clock at night. It came like a summer breeze, but in a very short time it became furious. Some of the simple people of Ireland said it was the work of the fairies, who had become displeased at the people. So they crawled under the bed and lowered themselves in wells to escape the fury of the elements. The next morning they came out to see what the "fairies" had done. They said they found that every haystack in Ireland had been blown down. They found that straw had been driven through oak boards as clean as a carpenter would drive a nail, and there are some who declare that a stone as big as a freight car had been blown seven miles from its resting place. They found that the waters had been lashed into such a terrible state that huge waves were lying on the shores of the lakes, and that sharks and small fish were found in the forests miles from their home in the ocean. The tale is told of the sailors who became shipwrecked, and landed on the back of a whale supposed to be an island, and the place carried the whale and sailors to a place of safety. Every clock on the public steeples was stopped, and the wind blew the whistles on the boats anchored at the wharves without an ounce of steam showing on the gauge. The people who remember this terrible wind tell how it carried the swords of the Knights and Lords from the scabbards, and left the powdered hair of the Queen as natural as the day she was born, and they say that the paint was removed from the barns, leaving the boards as bare as the day they came from the forest, and the rocks were carried from Mt. Chevalier to the town seven miles away. Others say the bells in the churches and school houses clattered as they never clattered before and chickens were found the next morning without a feather in their tails.

Leaves were found driven into the trunks of the trees, and corn was found cleaned from the cob on the stalk. Other terrible things happened 61 years ago on the "night of the big wind."

Great Record of Ocean Liner.

The greatest distance ever traveled in a single year by any creation of man moved by its own motive power, was completed yesterday by the steamship St. Louis of the American line, when she arrived at her dock for the seventeenth time during 1899. In 34 voyages across the Atlantic, between Southampton and New York, this American ship traveled 106,744 1/2 miles and carried 16,858 passengers, 5981 of them first-class. During all but two weeks the St. Louis was in commission and had not a single mishap. It would be rash to assert that those of the officers and crew of the St. Louis, who have been aboard her throughout the year, have traveled farther than any human beings ever traveled in the same length of time. There may be express messengers, railway postal clerks and sleeping car porters on long runs who can show a superior record. Likewise, there are perhaps, Pullman cars on transcontinental trains in constant service which roll up a greater year's mileage than 160,000, but no locomotive or other vehicle propelled by its own motive power can approach the St. Louis's record. Two hundred miles a day is a daily performance for any express flyer, while the St. Louis's average for the 365 days in the year is 292 miles. As a matter of fact, she was in port during 133 days, so that her average distance covered when at sea was 460 miles a day.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Talk of Re-districting.

There has been considerable talk about the present legislature re-districting the state for congressional purposes, but there appears to be no foundation for the talk. The federal census will be taken during the coming summer, and a redistricting will be necessary after that has been done. It would be necessary to convene the general assembly in special session after the census has been taken, and there is no disposition at this time to do that. The work of redistricting will probably fall to the next legislature, that will also elect a United States senator to succeed Hon. J. B. Foraker. The fight for the control of that body will be one of the hottest in the recent history of Ohio.—Ohio State Journal.

Symbolic Language.

It is an interest reversal of the accepted order of things to find a Chinaman instructing the occidental races as to improved methods of communication, but a paper which appears in the December issue of the National Review over the signature of Chihchen Lofengluh, the Chinese minister to London, has more than the interest of novelty. The writer argues that the phonetic system of writing, as it is found among most civilized nations, is both cumbersome and lacking in permanency. Sooner or later he points out, the sound of speech change with varying nations, and as the writing in due time follows the change of sound, language is impermanent and tends to disassociation of races. The Chinese language is symbolic; a sign stands not for a sound, but for an idea, and thus it has come into use not only among Chinamen, but as the medium of written communication for several adjacent nations, including Japan. Books written in the Chinese of 2,000 years ago can be read now with ease; moreover, a symbolic system, in the Chinese writer's requirements for a universal language than any system yet devised.

The most interesting part of the Chinese minister's contention, however, is his claim that Europeans already and unconsciously have found it expedient to introduce symbolic writing in dealing with certain subjects. Algebraic propositions and chemical formulae, for instance, are made instantly intelligible by the use of a few signs absolutely without significance phonetically. Even the use of "Mr." instead of "mister" marks a tendency to symbolic writing. Whether or not the need for a universal system of writing is so pressing that the world eventually will turn to it "in obedience to the law of evolution" is a proposition which philologists will find of some interest. At all events, Chihchen Lofengluh evidently may not be wrong in declaring that the code of symbols affords the only means of securing a universal means of communication. Past experiments with "universal languages" have served only to prove the stubbornness with which nations adhere to their inherited speech. A page of algebraic equations, like a bar of music written in the ordinary notation, may be as easily understood in Russia as in French or English. Could a similar system be broadened to include all the subjects which are known in common among most civilized nations?

Last Money For Slave Sale.

Dallas, Texas, Jan. 6.—An echo of slavery times was heard in Dallas today. It was the settlement of a debt contracted in 1860, in which the sale of a negro slave was the basis of the transaction. In the days "before the war" the McDonalds and Epperson families were among the leading planters of the Red River Valley. The head of the McDonalds of Lamar county, said a negro to Col. D. H. Epperson, of Red River county. Epperson gave a note for $750 to secure payment on the purchase. The war between the states interfered with the business arrangements of the McDonalds and Eppersons.

After the war the note was presented for payment and resisted on the ground that the abolition of slavery nullified the obligation. The matter got into the courts, and judgment for the face of the note was awarded. The case got tangled up on appeals and dragged along until a short time ago, when the Epperson agreed to settle with the McDonald side and stop litigation. Today ex-Senator Henry D. McDonald, a lawyer of Paris, Texas, representing J. W. McDonald, the holder of the note, and who is National Bank Examiner for Northern Texas, came to Dallas and met Joseph M. Dickson, lawyer for the Eppersons, and received from McDonald $750 cash in exchange for the old note executed in 1860.

This is probably the last slave that will be paid for in Texas. Colonel Epperson died in Red River county in 1878. Colonel McDonald has been dead a number of years. The slave that was sold in Clarksville, Texas, about the time the war ended.

Newbury.

The wheat in this vicinity was not sown early and there is no sign of injury by the fly. Stock is doing as well as it ever did in any winter in my remembrance. Some plowing was done before the cold spell. A record was kept of the number of wagon loads of manure that was hauled out on the Curtis farm during the last year and it amounted to three hundred and ten. If any farm can show a larger output of home made fertilizer, let us hear from it.

C. W. Oakes has bought a wind mill to be used to shell and grind corn. S. B. Oakes is getting ready to build a barn and has a saw mill on the farm to cut the lumber. The size is 40x60, with a basement eight feet deep under the whole.

Dr. H. S. Curtis has sold his practice in Noblesville, Ind., and will locate in Parkersburg if he can find rooms suitable for a dental office.

Robert Thompson, who has a store at Little Hocking, intends to return to Scotland, where he was raised. He will find a great change in the people after an absence of twenty years.

ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Board of Associated Charities For the Year 1899-99.

As the object of this organization is so well known to our people, I do not feel that any word of explanation is necessary in this report, as you all know we are trying to help the deserving needy to help themselves.

A very nice donation was received from the Sunshine Kindergarten, consisting of delicacies, which were given out to the sick.

Number of visits made by lady directors, 154.

The workers in the organization lament deeply the loss of two very valuable members and the needy of the city will come to realize that in those two, Mrs. Wm. Judd and Mr. Geo. W. Richards, they had true and faithful friends. Mrs. Judd was always ready to go wherever needy humanity called her, and when the supplies of the organization were exhausted, she did not hesitate to share the contents of her own larder and wardrobe with those who needed food and clothing.

Mr. Richards' long experience as a Trustee of the poor, and an active worker in the organization, had qualified him to speak with personal knowledge concerning almost any case that came up for consideration. His kindly spirit and methodical work rendered him a most valuable helper in the work of caring for those in need.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Respectfully,
MRS. H. E. SMITH, Sec.

No Ice Reported Between Cincinnati and Middleport Gorge.

The channel of the river at this point is entirely free from ice, and according to reports from above is clear all the way up to the first gorge, which is at Middleport. A passenger in over the C. & O. yesterday reported keeping watch all the way down from Huntington, and the channel was clear as far as he saw it. A few more days of this sort of weather will see the river open all its length. Unfortunately, however, unless the break-up is attended with considerable of a rise it will not but little good, except for the local packets. The several Pittsburgh towboats in the harbor here could be dispatched homeward with tow of empties now, so far as the ice is concerned, but the water is considered too low to make it worth while to start out. The reports from toward headwaters were not very encouraging for more water.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

More Trouble at St. Marys.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 8.—The trouble at St. Marys over the liquor question has not abated since the recent election. Application will be made before Judge Tavenner at Wheeling tomorrow to restrain G. B. Phillips, a druggist, from selling the stuff.

The three men, Miles Davis, J. J. Mahoney and William Cheney, who are serving six months each in the Pleasants county jail for contempt in disregarding an order of the Court concerning the sale of liquor, have, through their attorney, filed petition in the West Virginia Court of Appeals for a writ of habeas corpus. The hearing of the arguments in this matter will be before Judge English at Charleston Wednesday.

Matters at St. Marys seem to be getting in very much of a tangle.

Marion Street School.

Although the building is not yet entirely finished, the Marion street school will on next Monday become a factor among the educational institutions of the city. Six of the seven rooms will be ready by that time and will be occupied at once by the first to sixth grades inclusive. The school will open with about 275 scholars. Warren street will be the boundary line between the Washington street and Marion street school districts.

The public reception will probably be held in about two weeks, the exact date having not yet been fixed by the Board of Education.

Scratch, scratch, scratch; unable to attend to business during the day or sleep during the night. Ridding piles—horrible plague. Doan's Ointment cures. Never fails. At any drug store 50 cents.

"Forever Devil's Auction."

Chas. H. Yale's Forever Devil's Auction Co. will be presented this season with everything entirely new, costumes, scenery, cast and ballet; in fact, Mr. Yale has made so many changes in this season's production that the many thousands that have witnessed this spectacle in years past will find it hard to recognize one old feature. Mr. Yale has always been foremost in this peculiar line of attraction and feeling that by giving the public a new show each year, retaining the old title, they have more confidence than they would in going to see a show with a new name, that probably would not please them half so well. Auditorium Wednesday, Jan. 10.

"The Royal Box."

Charles Coghlan's successful play "The Royal Box" will be given at the Auditorium Saturday night, Jan. 13. This play has made one of the greatest hits on record in the metropolis in ten years.

The principal part is that of Clarence, the actor, the leading artist of England in the year 1810. The fourth act of the piece is divided into two scenes. The first pictures the dressing room of the actor, and the second the stage of the Drury Lane theatre, in London, with a drama in progress. In the stage scene the actor is presented playing Romeo in the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet." Wrought up to a state of mental hysteria through jealousy of the woman he loves, who sits in the royal box with the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV, he publicly denounces the first gentleman of Europe from the stage of his profligacy. The transition from the lovelorn Romeo to the madly infuriated actor, denouncing royalty, is instantaneous. The scene is one of remarkable power. The incident is a very delicate one, and the slightest divergence from the careful and discriminating lines on which Mr. Coghlan has laid down the business of the scene would cause it to sink from the sublimity of true art to the place of mediocre melodramatic situation.

Miss Gertrude Coghlan, the talented daughter of the late Charles Coghlan, plays the part of Cecil Bryce, the leading female role, and shows she has all the talent of the family. She will be assisted by Andrew Robson, who has played the late Mr. Coghlan's part many times.

Three Eclipses This Year.

In this, the last of the nineteenth century, which by the way, is not a leap year, though it is divisible by four there will be three eclipses, two of the sun and one of the moon.

The solar eclipse, taking place on the 28th of May, will be visible throughout the United States, and be total from the southern part of Virginia down through Mexico, while north of Norfolk, Va., it will be partial. In the City of Baltimore it will begin at 7:48 a. m. Of all phenomena of nature there is none so profoundly impressive and awe-inspiring as a total eclipse of the sun, and a trip through these regions of the country through which the shadow of the moon will sweep on the 28th of May is well worth undertaking. It scarcely admits of any doubt that many thousand people of the Northern and Middle States of the Union will go to see a phenomenon which comparatively few people have had the privilege of beholding. The average breadth of the eclipse of the sun will occur on the 21st of November. It will be annular, but not visible in this country. A partial eclipse of the moon will take place on the 12th of June, though it will not be visible in this country.

The little folks love Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Pleasant to take; perfectly harmless; positive cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma.

Said to Improve Horseradish.

Some people care for nothing but lemon on raw oysters, but there are others who desire horseradish. Usually such folks regard the strongest horseradish as the best, but an experienced vendor of the condiment, Peter O'Neill, of Castle Valley, pooh-poos this point of view. "Why should the strong horseradish be considered good?" says he. "It brings tears to your eyes and lifts the top of your head off and makes you want to sneeze. It has no taste whatever. The mild horseradish, that which has stood awhile, is the best and pleasantest always. There is nothing so foolish as to think that the strong, biting kind is the fresh—that is the reason why it is preferred to the mild sort—for the very stalest, weakest horseradish can be made in 20 minutes strong enough to blow your head off. All you need to do is to add salt to it. Try this some time. Just take any old horseradish, dump in a spoonful of salt and then notice the difference. I don't know why salt should have such a powerful effect on the stuff, but no doubt a chemist could tell you that."—Philadelphia Record.
